

Arsenio Franklin is the author of Unholy Revelations. He grew up in the small town of Portland, TN. Born into a family of Vols fans, he graduated from the University of Tennessee with a degree in sports management because learning a foreign language wasn't required. After living aimlessly for a few years, he went back to school and earned a Master's in public relations. He worked for several agencies before his wife, Laura, saved his life by forcing him to seek treatment for major depression in 2016.

A lifelong reader, he began using his free time to write. He shares poetry and writes about mental illness on his blog, Depressed House Husband. In addition to writing, he works as an after-school teacher. In his free time he enjoys running, watching NBA basketball and playing video games. A born-again WWE fan, he will defend professional wrestling as the last great performance art until his death. He lives in Gallatin, TN with his wife, Laura